creatysle of Astrouomy, very necessary for Physyke and Surgerye, declarynge what herbes, and all kynde of medecynes are appropriate and vnder the influence of the Planetes, sygnes and constellacions. And also the partes and members of the bodye thereto correspondynge, and howe ye shall brynge the vertue of the Heuens and nature of the Sterres to euery parte of mans bodye beyng delectad or sycke to the soner recoueraunce of helth.

And also howe to chole the most luc-key dayes and tymes for the aboue sayde, the whiche shal-be appoynted by the Almanacke yerelye, accordynge to the course of the Moone, passynge by all the Signes and Sterres in one reuolucion gathered and set forth by ANTHONY ASKHAM Physiciō in the yere of our Lorde God M.

of februarie.

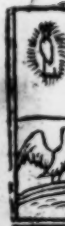

THOMAS PAYNEL

Repulse the begynnyng of euery malady ffor medecines ministred not in deuē seāson.
Dothe not relpeue or helpe the mylery Of suche as hath by longe contraction Dyffered the tyme of mynistracion.
Wherby theyr maladye ferce ly myght increse Nature corrupted the bodye to deface.

In tyme to mynyster medecynes the sicke doth relpeue
And wīne out of tyme dothe the much damage Increase of paynes the pacient dothe achieue But in tyme to take pleasure the sore doth all wage Al thynges in seāson shulde haue theyr passage Remedy for dease in tyme to procure.
Thus all thynges are subiecte to tyme and to measure.

THE EPISTLE to the Reader.

It is manysse and well knowen, good Reader, that al herbes stones, gummes, and metalles, hath theyr generacions; disposi-cyons, vertues and proprieties of the Sonne, Moone, and Sterres, so that euery herbe hath certayne Sterres appropiate and addicte vnto them, of whom they receiue suche influence and operacyon, as is accordyng to the nature of the Sterres, the whiche is knowen of longe tyme by dayly experience, in consideryng theyr mouinges, their cōiunctions and aspectes. And also markyng theyr influences, and properties at such lyke tymes aforesaid Also by further experiēce, the Phy-losopher hath founde forth seuen A.ii. Sterres

Sterres ozrotical in seven feveral heauens oz speres, and of sundrye influences and operations, and ac-cordyng to suche men of such lyke condycyon, they haue gyuen them names, as Saturne, Jupiter, and Mars, and so furth.

Also all the rest of the Sterres are fpyred in the eyght heauen, oz spere amonges whom are ymagened. xii. beastes called sygnes, and. xlviii. other constellacions, and by suche lyke experyence of influences, hath named a certayne nōber of Sterres to be a Ramme, to be a Bull, to be a Lyon, to be a Scorpio, to be a Beare, to be a Dogge and so forth Also the heauenlye Sterres hath certayne commyxtion with the elementes, and the Elementes with them, so that all thynges made of the Elementes, receyueth certayne qualytes and operations sensible, by an Elementall power, and also they

3 al receyue certayne operacyons, and e. vertues insensible and occulte, by c. a celestiall and heauenly power, as te all herbes and medecines solutisse n are either, hote, dry, moyst, or colde, d by the elementall power, and also by the celestyal power, some purge e coloꝝ, some melancoly, some fleume e and some from the head, some from the stomake, some from the herte, f. some from the lyuer, and so foꝝth of e the whiche no man knoweth no other cause but the alonely pꝛopertye and vertue of the heauens.

Also furthermoze it is knowne and experte howe the planetes sygnes, and constellacions doth woꝝke pecticularly in diuers partes of mans bodye, and specially the seuen pla-netes, vnto whose influence all other Sterres are obedyente and agreable, furthermoze knowe that the Sonne, and Moone are cheife of al other planetes, foꝝ the Sonne is the minister of al lyuely propertye, and giueth al thinges lyfe, and makethe all herbes to growe, tyl they come to their perfection.

Also the Sonne draweth first fro the roote the lyuely moysture, that maketh the herbe to growe, & wax.

Saturne holdeth the mater together in the roote stalke and leaues.

Jupiter geueth the temperature, benefete, shap, and fashyon, and the ayrie humour and smell.

Mars hardeneth and gvueth the wooddy stalkes and strength.

The Sonne gveth a continual increase of lyfe, by a liuely hete.

Venus gveth the flowers, fayrenes and temperate humour.

Mercurye geueth the barke and seede, the preueand occulte properte

The Moone geueth the leaues, and watry humoure.

And thus vnderstande of all other thinges bothe of stones, gummes, and

and metalles, and also of the body and sundrye partes of mankynde, furthemoze knowe that the fyrste and most pyncypall workeman is the father of heauen, the which ha-uyng in the Godhead, in the mynde deuine, and in the heuuen archetypi, the edees simpyltudes, and the ymages of all thynges create, befoze the creation of the worlde, the whiche at the proper instant of the creatyon he hath infused these simpyltudes and ymages, beyng euen percelles, and powers of the Godhead in all his creatures, and as he hath made all thynges of nought, so are yet al thig; nought, the whiche wanteth these edees, similitudes, ymages and powers of the Godheade, for he is Omnia in omnibus, secondarpe he hath create instrumentes as second causes the whiche are the Sonne, Moone, and Sterres, whose matter, influence

and operacyons is nothyng but by his power infused, the which he hath made alonely to declare his glozy and hyghe woꝝkemanſhippe to his intellectuall creatnes.

Alſo knowe that the Sonne is the pꝛyncypall woꝝkeman of God, and the planetes are instrumentes and toles wherewith the Sonne woꝝ-keth, and the ſignes and conſtella-tions are other meane instrumen-tes to the planetes, and the Element are the mater that they woꝝke vpon, and all thynges made of the foure elementes, are the ſubſtān-ces and bodyes with lyfe ſchape & ſarpon that they make of the Elementes, as man, beaſt, fyſhe, fowle, herbe and ſtone.

Alſo knowe that the Moone is the loweſt of all the planetes and next to the Elementes, hauynge the leſt and ſwifteſt courſe of all the other planetes, and is the mediatrix, ca-riare

5 clare and daily instrumentes, and coueyre of the vertues and proper tyes of al the other planetes, from the one to the other, and is also the commixter and ioyner together of all the heauens and elementes as by example, when the Sonne com meth to vs warde in sprynge tyme and at all other tymes he gyuethe lyght to all the Sterres and pla netes, and this lyght by an occulte vertue, is mouyng and lyuely, and is coueyed by the Moone to the ele ment of the fyre, and there is made a lyuely heate.

Also the Moone, and the elemente of the fyre doth conuey it to the ele mentes of the ayre, where it is made a temperate lyuely heate, and from the ayre to the water, and so recey ueth an humozall moisture in con cerning the temperate liuely heate synallye the earthe, the whiche is the mother and matter of all the other other thinges, and this liuely hete entrynge and openynge the pores of the earth, and also of the rootes and seedes of herbes, geueth quicknyng, and mouynge vpwarde agayne from the centre, and by the elemente of the water, mynystrer by the Moone a conseruyng moisture, and by the Ayre and fyre a temperate lyuely heate, the herbe beginneth to sprynge and appere sensible. Then the Moone in her course passynge by the Sterres, signes or constellation of Saturn mynystrerh the influence of Sa-turne to the herbe, the whiche thicketh and kepeth the matter i rotes stalkes and leaues together, by the element of the earth.

Also in passynge by Jupiter she inmystrerh his influence to the herbe, in giuing temperature shape faci-on and smelle, by the elemente of the ayre, and in passynge by Mars, by

6 by Venus, by Mercury, or by these Sterres and cōstellacions ye shal vnderstande in lyke maner.

Also yf the Moone shuld not haue this ministracion dayly emonges the planetes, this succession of the growing of herbes shulde not fo-lowe ordynatelye, and oftentymes we se daylye decay and lete of these proceedinges, the whiche the cause is of the coniunctions and aspectes of contrary planetes to the proceedinges thereof, as at suche tyme, when Venus and Mercury shulde bryng forth the flower fruyte and seede. Then at that proper instant or at the entraunce of the reuolu-cion fygure, Saturne and Mars, being in dygnities, doth thicke and make cold, dry, and earthy and vtterly fleeth that tender matter and lyuely humour, whereof the flower and seede shulde haue ben orderyed and made, and thus spualle the Moone

Moone hauing dayly administration of all maner of propertyes of herbes, both elemental, and celest-al, it shalbe declared by the course of the Moone in the sygnes, the tyme of ministryng of herbes and medecines for al partes of the bo-dye, the whiche tymes shalbe knowen by the Almanacke as is afore saide, wherefore nowe to conclude gentell reader I haue wytten this lytell treaspyse, not for lerned men but al onely for the vnlernd Englishe reader, that they may partly percepue the workynge of the omnipotent power, in hys instrumentes, the heuens and elementes in the elementates, or in al thinges that are made of the. iiii. elemente to the hyghe laude and prayse of the Depte, to whom be all glozys worlde without ende Amen.

¶ The deuption of this boke.

The fyrst parte declareth the influence of the seuen planetes in herbes, stones, gummes, and mettalles, & in the partes of mans body, and also in what signes, constellations & starres, euery planete hath most dominion and lordshipp.

The seconde parte declareth the influence of the. xii. signes, in herbes stones gummes and mettalls, bothe by theyr owne influence and by the influences of the planettes, that hath lordshipp in them, and also certayne degrees, wherein diuerse starres are set, beyng principall starres of sundry constellations, belonging to certayne planettes, & also what parte of mans body the signe gouerneth, & howe to bringe the vertues of the Heauens and Sterres to what parte of mannes bodye that ye wyll.

The thyrde part declareth by example howe ye shal byng the vertue of the Sterres to euery parte of mans body, by the course of the Moone, with a table of the sygnes and Planetes, and howe ye shall knowe in euery signe what planetes hath dominacion therein, whereby ye may lyghtlye perceyue the herbes and medecynes belongyng to the saide planetes, the whiche shalbe ministred in that sygne, for that parte of the bodye, the whiche the sygne gouerneth, the Moone beynge in the sayde sygne.

Also there foloweth the triplycites of sygnes and triplycytes of the partes of the bodye, and howe ye shall minister in the one sygne for the other, and to the one member for the sykenes of the other, with a table for the same, also there is a nother ministracion after the malignions of the Moone.
